The Island of Islay is Scotland's other minor country, but unlike its larger neighbour, the Isle of Islay itself is not an island at all, but a group of islands which are connected to each other by a series of causeways. Or in the case of some of its more easterly islands, by vast distance. The four main Islay islands are Islay, Jura, Colonsay and Soay, and together they make up Scotland's little extremity of land. It was, up until 1892, the most remote island in Britain. The large reddish-brown peat covered islands lie in the Firth of Clyde. The biggest island, Islay, is the northernmost of the group, lying 53km (33mi) from the Scottish mainland and 14km (9mi) from the remote Isle of Gigha. To the south is Jura, the second largest, an island of only 1.6 sq km (0.5 sq mi). Colonsay, the third largest, is small, flat and round, with a circumference of 3km (2.2mi) and an area of 20 acres (8ha). It is described by the British Geographical Survey as 'a very small island of interest from a botanical point of view, having few species of flora and some breeding birds'. There is a population of around 20 people living on the island. The smallest and most northerly of the group is Soay, almost a sub-island of the second largest, Jura. This island is smaller still, with an area of 1 sq km (0.4 sq mi). Even as a sub-island, Soay is far larger than the larger main islands. It has a population of just over 400 people. Soay is unique in that it has not had a single human inhabitant for almost 1,000 years. The only significant prehistoric sites on the island are two tombs in the form of stone cairns, on the tops of the mountain at Stac Pollaidh and Broadford. Some ancient remains of a village are also located near these hills. A further pair of tombs with a possible modern, or post-medieval, function can be found near the nearby settlement of Tobermory. The reason the island has not been inhabited, apart from the fact that it is so remote, is that it is extremely windy and wet. It is also on the west coast of Scotland,

The NFL's reigning rookie of the year has been praised by his teammates and head coach Dirk Koetter throughout the regular season. But Winston's work behind the scenes has been even more impressive. Since Week 4, the Bucs have moved locker room trash cans outside and removed all nail clippers inside to eliminate distractions. It's an effort to make sure every member of the team feels part of the organization, along with its 50,000-plus fans, and a big step toward what the Bucs hope will be a long playoff run. "It's a big deal," Koetter said Monday. "You need to be able to focus on football. It's a fresh start for them and there will be some initial bumps in the road. You need to focus on playing and not so much on things in the new environment." Alluding to the new sideline trash can that now lines the sideline near the locker room, Koetter said, "I want them to feel like they can go around and take a dump, then go back to work, and not have to ask, 'Is it OK to do this in the locker room?' There's a new normal there and that's the way we have to handle ourselves going forward." Winston has been the driving force behind the effort. He has personally placed trash cans on the other side of the locker room and removed all of the nail clippers. On Monday, Winston
