Launched in November 2012, Multiplay Studios was a UK video game developer. Founded by Charlie Askew and Christian Attor, the studio was set up with the goal of creating experiences that pushed the boundaries of gaming, primarily through mixed reality. The main product of the studio was the a multiplayer game in a world where you play a character that can be downloaded into a massively multiplayer game (MMO). The name of the game, EVE: Gunjack, was coined by the developers. Gunjack was released on the iPad in September 2013 and on Steam in November 2013. It was a successful launch, selling over a million units in its first year. Gunjack sold over 10 million units across all platforms in its first year. Gunjack was initially an iPad app, until a switch to the Steam platform in November 2013. Before that, the developer was creating a version of the game for Facebook. Gunjack was re-released for Steam on April 14, 2015 and was again re-released in July of the same year. In late

2018, the developers released a version of the game for Android. The game offers players three distinct classes with unique abilities, extra combat skills, and special weapons, and a unique fantasy-themed world. The player is free to move around and fight in the world. Throughout the game the player will have access to weapons and abilities that are most suited to their combat style. Gameplay The player can jump, swing, climb, duck, and dodge projectiles in their game. The player can choose to fight alone, co-operatively or against opponents. The player's success depends on their ability to both execute and evade while they perform the required actions. A player can customize their character by selecting the weapons and skills they wish to use in a given match. Once a match has begun the player can choose to play as one of the three classes available. In each class there is a selection of abilities and skills to employ. The game is 2D, but players can switch to 3D mode. Story The Story is set in the distant future of the galaxy, a universe where new discoveries in high technology have led to an extraordinary future. Exploration has brought the human race a long way from its homeworld, but the death of Earth is not as far away as it once was. The Scrapyard, the largest slave trading station in the universe, is an outpost for freelance scavengers. With the technology to scan other 82157476af
